Introduction

The study guide “English for being a leader” was designed for university students of non-linguistic specialties. Its aim is to develop students’ leadership skills through learning A2 English. Nowadays it is obvious that development of leadership skills in young people is one of the actual issues in the world pedagogy. As the international and domestic labour market made its requirements, one of those is a specialist has to own hard and soft skills to be competitive and demanded. Meanwhile leadership skills can be useful in a man’s ordinary life. The uniqueness of the study guide is in the fact that leadership skills are suggested to be developed not just on the basis of special tasks and exercises, but through the studying one of the university disciplines, for example, English as here.

The study guide was designed according to university Syllabus on English, Level A2. It contains 9 Modules on 9 topics which include such sections as Reading, Vocabulary, Grammar, Listening, Speaking, Writing, Values. At the end of the course students are suggested to do a Project work. The study guide tasks are aimed at development of students’ leadership skills and also each Module is devoted to a value which helps to develop leadership skills. The study guide contains 9 Tests according to 9 Modules. Also the guide has appendixes: Texts for Listening (printed texts from Section Listening, appendixes A-J) and Texts for Reading (additional texts for reading with the task on discussion, appendixes K-T). Texts from Section Reading of each Module, Texts for Listening and Texts for Reading from appendixes were taken from different British or international English-learning sites. These sites are represented in the References. With the purpose of comfortable use of the guide there is Contents of Modules (table 1) and Study guide language (figure 1) in the beginning of the book.
